

A Day in Plumas County

Lake Almanor: Start your day in Plumas County at the crystal clear blue waters of Lake Almanor. The lake is a destination for many outdoor recreational opportunities and is one of the prettiest lakes in the Northern California region, with stunning views of Lassen Peak in the distance.

Lunch in Greenville: After you've splashed around on the lake, stop for lunch in historic Greenville. Here you'll find a variety of dining options, all in buildings that look like they came straight out of the old west.

Western Pacific Railroad Museum: After lunch head over to the Western Pacific Railroad Museum. With over 100 locomotives and cars, and a expansive collection of railroad equipment and artifacts, they offer a hands-on experience in authentic railroad facility.

Plumas-Eureka State Park: Your next stop is Plumas-Eureka State Park. The park has two lakes, trails, a museum, and historic gold stamp mill. Enjoy the beautiful scenery of the region and learn about the days of the gold rush!

Rest and Relax: Finish your day off by checking in to the Quincy Feather Bed Inn. This boutique inn has five rooms and two cottages and is located historic downtown Quincy, convenient walking distance from shopping and dining - the perfect place to grab dinner at the end of your Plumas adventure!
